It's what's inside that counts!

Learning Outcome

Describe detailed facts about events or actions in work and social contexts, in written or spoken situations

Ask your partner:

- Have you ever really wanted something but thought that you could never get it? What was it?
- What does the saying "Don't judge a book by its cover" mean to you?

Can Do Statements

- I can talk about myths and legends in different cultures.
- I can talk about things that had happened.
- I can report facts about events and actions.

Let's Explore!

Scarface is rewarded for his bravery.

* When you show "bravery" you do something even though you are afraid.

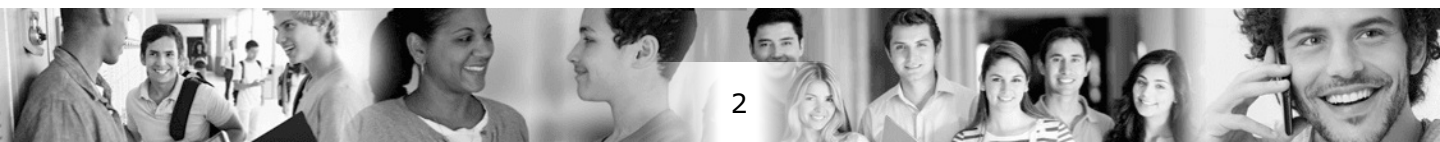

Instructions: Read the text aloud.

From far and wide, the beauty of the chief's daughter was known to all. The finest young men had asked for her hand in marriage but no one was good enough for the chief's daughter. A young dreamer living in the village had fallen in love with the prized maiden. Each day he imagined how it would be to live with her forever, but he had always been too shy to approach her. Not only was he poor, but he also had scars on his face and was known as Scarface. One day, the young man dreaming of marriage, gathered up all his courage and went to ask the chief's daughter if she would be his wife. When he got to her tent, the girl was doing beadwork. The boy was very nervous.

"Oh, beautiful maiden, will you have me for your husband?" he stammered. The girl had looked up from her beadwork. "You?" She laughed. "Why would I want to marry you? What can someone like you give me?" Scarface was so humiliated that he turned and ran away. He ran until he could go no further. Lonely and exhausted, he curled up on the ground and let his eyelids close. Peeking through the clouds, the son of Moon and Sun caught sight of the unhappy man sleeping. Within a moment, Morning Star, as Sun and Moon's son was known, had descended to earth and carried Scarface up into the sky.

Morning Star built a sweat lodge. When he had completed it, he brought hot coal and a stick into the lodge, and Sun and Scarface went inside. Sun had laid some sweet grass on the coal, and a sweet smell rose into the air as the grass began to burn. Sun chanted a prayer and cleansed the boy's face. After performing this ritual four times, Sun led Scarface out of the lodge. What do you think Morning Star saw? A young man who looked just like him, with long, yellow hair had no scars on his face! Even Morning Star's mother could not tell them apart.

The Past Perfect Tense

You use the Past Perfect tense:

1. To talk about a completed action before something else in the past.
2. To explain or give a reason for something in the past.
3. As part of the third conditional.

The structure of the Past Perfect is:

subject + had + past participle

He had always been too shy to approach her.

Look at these examples in the chart:

Use	Example	Meaning
To talk about a completed action before something else happened	Charlie had already done his homework when Tina called.	First, Charlie did the homework, then Tina called.
To explain or give a reason for something in the past	He had drunk a glass of water, then he wasn't thirsty.	He drank a glass of water, after that, he was not thirsty.
As part of the third conditional	If Clarice had known I was in town, she would have visited me.	Clarice did not know I was in town, so she did not visit me.

Examples:

- The finest young men had asked for her hand in marriage but no one was good enough for the chief's daughter.
- Each day he imagined how it would be to live with her forever, but he had always been too shy to approach her.
- The girl had looked up from her beadwork.
- Morning Star, as Sun and Moon's son was known, had descended to earth and carried Scarface up into the sky.
- Sun had laid some sweet grass on the coal, and a sweet smell rose into the air.

Learning Points

The Participle Clause: Present Participle

You can use a participle clause to give your reader more information about a noun in your sentence. The participle clause comes immediately after the noun it talks about.

The participle clause can also be referred to as a reduced clause, as the conjunction and verb 'to be' have been removed, shortening the clause.

That man standing over there is my boss.
(= The man who is standing over there is my boss.)

The present participle can replace any active tense.

For example:

Trucks driving across the bridge have to pay a toll.
(Trucks that drive across the bridge have to pay a toll.)

Who was the boy wearing the blue cap?
(Who was the boy who was wearing the blue cap?)

Students handing in assignments early get bonus points.
(Students who hand in their assignments early get bonus points.)

Examples:

- A young dreamer living in the village had fallen in love with the prized maiden.
- One day, the young man dreaming of marriage, gathered up all his courage.
- Peeking through the clouds, the son of Moon and Sun caught sight of the unhappy young man sleeping.
- After performing this ritual four times, Sun led Scarface out of the lodge.
